Feng Shui Interior Design Case Study 7

Glow Urban Spa, Knightsbridge, London

Before...

- A large open plan ground floor with no privacy for clients.
- Basement area with narrow stairway, narrow hallway and very little natural light.

After...

- Maintaining the circulation in the ground floor whilst also affording privacy for the nail bar clients – the void spaces are all auspicious dimensions measured with the Loa Bann ruler.
- We suggested glazed glass cut-outs to maximise natural light in basement

Exacting Dimensions

- Working with the architectural plans, we indicated the best positions for sinks (energy drainage) and uplighting and advised on colours and reception layout and auspicious dimensions of furniture and partitions.
- Logo design – we assessed a selection of logos for balance and symbolic impact.
- Earth energy – the premises suffered from a line of geopathic stress and this has been neutralised by a specialist Raditech machine.

Testimonial

"I can wholeheartedly recommend employing the services of Sarah McAllister, Director of the Feng Shui Agency. I am opening an Urban Day Spa in Knightsbridge and was keen to follow the principles of Feng Shui so I contacted Sarah at the conceptual stage. I had sourced my site so had a specific space with which to work.

I had already employed an architect/designer so Sarah worked alongside my Designer and Graphic design agency, ensuring my logo and brand identity was favourable, and that my refit plans followed the relevant principles suitable to the site location and planned usage whilst always respecting and working with the brand vision.

Sarah thoroughly explained all the concepts and their relevance to me, without using lots of baffling jargon. She provided clear advice and an extremely detailed and informative report that enabled me to guide my team of builders through the project. Always very generous with her time, Sarah is very approachable, extremely knowledgeable and maintained regular contact at all times whilst never being overbearing.

Sarah showed sensitivity to the limitations of my project (structural, financial or other) and the commercial practicalities of the space, regularly offering alternatives if we were unable to implement particular suggestions whilst maintaining a real dedication and enthusiasm for my project including a great follow up service."

Origins of Feng Shui

- While Feng Shui originated in China over 5000 years ago, it has universal application, and is not dependent on any religious belief. Its roots can be found in the simple nature awareness of agricultural farmers and also the scholarly influence of astrologers and government advisers to the Imperial families of China.
- Feng (pronounced fung in Cantonese or fong in Mandarin) literally translates as wind and Shui (pronounced tsoy or shway) means water. Chinese concepts are famously poetic, and these terms refer to concepts of energy dynamics within the universe.
- Feng is the wind that can disperse or stimulate energy, and Shui is water that can hold and harmonise energy.
- Feng Shui is the original ecological design and can be used as a vehicle to understand our interconnectedness with nature on a physical and spiritual level.
